General information about permit types

Stall Permits

A stall is a booth, bench, table or stand on which merchandise is displayed or exposed for sale. To carry out this activity in a public place, a permit is required from Council.

Any booth, bench, table or stand must not:

- obstruct pedestrian movement on a footpath
- obstruct driveways
- obstruct vehicle movement
- distract motorists.

Upon approval of a permit, we may impose these and any other conditions.

Busking Permits

A busker is an entertainer who gives impromptu performances in streets, parks, etc.

If busking involves the soliciting or receipt of money in a public place, a permit is required from Council.

Buskers are not permitted to:

- use amplification devices
- use abusive or offensive language
- use dangerous items in a performance, like knives or fire
- disrupt retailers
- display items for sale or distribute flyers.

Upon approval of a permit, we may impose these and any other conditions.

Buskers can keep any money they receive during a performance.

Touting and Business Advertising Publications Permits

Touting means to approach another person and publicise either verbally or in writing a business, commercial or trade activity.

To carry on this activity in a public place, a permit is required from Council.

Touters are not permitted to:

- use amplification devices
- use abusive or offensive language

- use dangerous items to demonstrate their business, commercial or trade activity
- disrupt retailers
- display items for sale
- allow flyers, business advertising publication or other distribution materials to become litter.
- Upon approval of a permit, we may impose these and any other conditions.

A business advertising publication means a publication that publicises any business, commercial or trade activity.

Publication means any printed or written matter (not including a newspaper). Publications include a:

- book, pamphlet or leaflet
- circular
- handbill
- notice or ticket
